Today's Game

BYU's offense and Adam Haysbert hope to continue flying high this week.

To many BYU football fans, Tulsa's highly successful football program has remained a well-kept secret back in the Midwest somewhere. But, after today's game with the Hurricanes, there will probably be plenty of respect in Utah for the visitors.

Unknown to many is the fact that Tulsa has had one of the most successful football programs in the country over the past several years. And they've put it together by playing some tough competition along the way

In a sense, they're going through what BYU experienced—and is still experiencing to a certain degree—during the late '70s. They defeat good competition and finish the season with an outstanding record but are ignored by the media because they are members of the Missouri Valley Conference. Four straight years now they have won the conference championship.

Again this year, the Hurricanes have an impressive schedule featuring BYU, Arkansas, Oklahoma State, East Carolina, Southwestern Louisiana and Texas Tech as non-conference opponents.

Last year Tulsa finished the season with an 8-3 record. Its three losses were to Arkansas (14-17), Oklahoma (18-28) and Oklahoma State (0-9). Their defensive strength is evident in that only three teams were able to score more than 20 points against them.

Tulsa's offense, meanwhile, produced point totals of 34, 26, 39, 59, 30 and 31 last season. And this year, they seem to have picked up where they left off, outscoring defending NCAA Division II champion Southern Illinois 23-10 two weeks ago.

Last week, Tulsa took the week off to prepare for the BYU air barrage.

For the Cougars, today's game offers a chance to extend the nation's longest winning streak to 14 games and possibly move up a notch or two in the polls. Also, BYU can always use some added respect in the Midwest.

Tulsa's powerful defense will receive the supreme test today against the Cougars. Last week, BYU put 47 points on the scoreboard against a Baylor defense that had 13 starters returning from 1983. And the Cougar defense shut down the Baylor offense, limiting them to 372 total yards.

In addition to the powerful passing game, BYU showed Tulsa scouts that it can run the ball too. Robert Parker picked up 131 of BYU's 209 rushing yards.

Tulsa quarterback Steve Gage and his cohorts on offense will likely discover that BYU's defense ranks among the best in the nation. The Cougars came close to shutting out powerful Pittsburgh and then held Baylor to two touchdowns. The Cougars have been particularly good against the run—Tulsa's forte. Baylor managed only 90 yards on the ground and Pittsburgh could muster only 146.

For the past couple of weeks people have been asking how good this BYU team really is. Today's game with Tulsa might make the answer to that question a little clearer

Last Week

Steve Young—surely you remember him, don't you?—was sitting high above the playing field at Cougar Stadium Saturday afternoon. He was doing TV commentating for the BYU-Baylor football game, and occasionally, when he wasn't saying anything, he only shook his head as he watched the action far below.

"This is incredible," he said, off the air "I can't believe this. This program is really taking off. It's amazing."

Doug Robinson
Deseret News

Baylor Coach Grant Teaff must know how Custer felt when the general perhaps screamed: "Where'd they get all those Indians?"

Ray Herbat
Salt Lake Tribune

Baylor football coach Grant Teaff will probably speak to his friend LaVell Edwards of BYU, who is one of the coaches' representatives on the NCAA Football rules committee, about the chances of borrowing a page from the judicial system making it illegal to place rival teams in double jeopardy.

Marion Dunn
Provo Daily Herald

It was probably as shocking an afternoon to Cougar fans as it was to Baylor fans, but for completely opposite reasons.

BYU disposed of its Southwest Conference opponent as easily as it disposes of most of its Western Athletic Conference foes. And it was being billed as possibly the toughest home game of the year for the Cougars. Baylor was the last team to beat BYU (last year's opening game) and had gone on to play in the Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl on New Year's Eve. Some were predicting the Bears to be in the thick of the SWC race again this year

But after jumping to a 21-7 first-quarter lead, BYU went on to thump

It was a long day for Baylor's running backs.

the Bears from Waco 47-13. Once again, the defensive effort was stellar. And the offense rolled up an impressive 524 yards of total offense.

One surprise on offense was the running game. The Cougars produced 209 yards on the ground, most of them coming via the legs of JC transfer Robert Parker, who made his first real appearance as a Cougar. Parker collected 131 yards of real estate, most in the second half when the Cougars were trying to gobble up the clock.

Robbie Bosco's performance was nothing short of spectacular—again. He completed 28 of 43 passes for 315 yards and no interceptions. By halftime he had five TD passes and added another in the second half.

One of his big targets for the day was senior tight end David Mills, who grabbed six passes for 115 yards and two touchdowns. One of Mills' TD catches could be classified in the "great" category. With two Baylor defenders all over him, he hauled in a perfectly thrown pass while in full stride near the end line of the end zone.

Defensively Leon White had another superb day as did nearly every Cougar defender. In all, the Cougars produced four interceptions. One was a Christmas present to Jim Herrmann after Leon White batted a pass into the air and it fell directly into Herrmann's arms.

Walk Ons

By Marion Dunn
Herald Sports Editor

Just before the first day of football practice in the fall of 1982 BYU coach LaVell Edwards and his staff were going over the roster. It was in alphabetical order and when Edwards reached the Bs he read "Mark Bellini" and stopped. Looking around the conference table, Edwards asked: "Who is Mark Bellini and what position does he play?"

It was a good question.

Someone answered, "I think he's a defensive back." Defensive coach Dick Felt said, "No. I think he's a wide receiver."

Bellini was listed on the early charts as a defensive back, but it didn't take more than two or three days of practice for receivers coach Norm Chow and the other staff members to realize that an excellent young wide receiver had walked into their lives.

When BYU boarded the plane for its second game of the season against defending national champion Georgia in Athens, only one freshman made the trip.

His name was Mark Bellini. His position was wide receiver.

What caused the confusion and makes this a most unusual accomplishment is the fact that Mark Bellini was a walk-on.

A walk-on is just what the name implies: a student athlete who does not have a scholarship, usually was not recruited, and usually does not have a reputation equal to those team members who were recruited and have scholarships. This youngster simply walks on campus and tells the coaching staff he wants to play football.

At BYU it is actually that simple although some universities screen walk-ons as thoroughly as players they recruit.

This might be confusing to old-timers because at one time all the players were walk-ons. This gradually changed with the first separation of players into the haves and have-nots, the haves being players who were given jobs such as winding a 5-day clock or turning on the sprinklers in the stadium and those who did not have jobs.

When college football became really big business, the athletic scholarship—the grant-in-aid—was created. This eventually reached a high of 120 and the walk-on became a rare bird.

But he was saved from total extinction when the major universities limited the number of scholarships a school could give from 120 to 95.

Suddenly the walk-on became a valued commodity. It is fairly safe to say that every school fielding a football team has at least one walk-on who is a starter. And certainly all have several who are at least part-time players. But even those walk-ons who never letter are vital to their team because they insure the coaching staff of enough players to conduct practices the way they want them conducted.

"We don't make it harder on walk-ons," Edwards said talking about the program at BYU "but the system does. There are some things we can't do, like having them eat at the training table. But we don't treat them differently on the field."

Bellini didn't take long to convince Edwards and his staff that he deserved to play as a wide receiver. And he was placed on scholarship as is usually the case with walk-ons who earn playing time.

Bellini stands 6-0 and weighs 175 pounds. He has great hands and runs pass patterns well. He was redshirted last year, but made the trip to the opening game against Baylor before the decision was made to hold him out for the year.

As a sophomore this year he is listed as the backup split end behind Glen Kozlowski, but the way BYU operates he is practically a starter. The wide receivers usually alternate bringing plays in from the bench.

A former BYU wide receiver who made good as a walk-on had a harder time setting his scholarship. This was Neil Balholm who graduated two years ago and is with the Denver Gold of the USFL.

Balholm walked-on at BYU out of Vancouver Wash., and didn't impress the staff at first.

"We didn't think he was going to help us, and tried to dissuade him," receivers coach Norm Chow said. "Doug Scovil kept urging us to let him go, but we kept noticing one thing about him — he caught the ball. I mean, he kept catching the ball. We kept him and he became one of our great receivers."

Another BYU walk-on who went to the pros is tightend Rob Anderson. He went to the Los Angeles Rams from BYU.

Linebacker Doug Adams, who eventually served as a captain, is another former walk-on who made it big at BYU.

This year there are 55 walk-ons at BYU. Some of them have big names.

Freshmen twin defensive backs

Chris and Kerry Edwards played football at Hurricane High School where they played for the state championship. Their father Wayne, resigned as principal to become the head coach and is also LaVell Edwards' brother.

Another set of twins, freshmen running backs Alema and Tausu Harrington are from Honolulu. Their father is the famous entertainer, Al Harrington.

Freshman wide receiver Jonathan Plater is a younger brother of former BYU star pass catcher Danny Plater, Steve Haymond, a starting safety, has been in the BYU program for five years. He started out as a walk-on.

Perhaps the most celebrated walk-on at BYU is kicker Lee Johnson.

who played for the Chicago Bears before being injured.

Some of the Cougar heroes in the 20-14 victory over Pittsburgh this fall were walk-ons.

They include strong safety Steve Haymond who was an all-state player at Salt Lake City's Skyline High School who served a mission to Taiwan and played a big role in the win over Pitt and running back Kelly Smith who was state Most Valuable Player at Beaver High School and played at wide receiver and returned kicks before winning a starting role in the backfield this fall, and punter-kicker Lee Johnson who booted two field goals against the Panthers.

Johnson, who punts barefooted and kicks field goals and PATs with his shoe on, was named to Sports Illustrated's pre-season All-American Walk-On team this fall.

Other varsity members who started as walk-ons are sophomore offensive lineman David Kins of Payson, kicker Pete Rossi and Shane Slumway.

Johnson is one of the leading punters and kickers in the nation, of course, and is a great example of the walk-on who gains fame and possible fortune.

Rossi, who backs-up Johnson, is a 5-11, 176 pound senior from Arcadia, Calif. He played one year at Pasadena City College where he kicked a school record 47-yard field goal, then went on a mission.

After his mission, he walked-on at BYU and redshirted in 1982. Last year he kicked two field goals for the jayvee team and missed one PAT attempt with the varsity.

There is still a place for the walk-on in college football. To show how important the walk-on is, Texas Tech and Appalachian State both have received national attention for their recruiting posters for walk-ons.

Texas Tech started it all with their poster showing a toddler in a Tech jersey and holding a football helmet. On the poster it says: "Some people just can't wait to walk on at Texas Tech."

Appalachian State has a pair of toddlers wearing the school's home and road uniforms on its poster.

The idea begins to show players who weren't recruited for one reason or another that they are still important and there is a place for them.

They are important and there is a place for them at BYU and other WAC schools.

Colorado State sophomore Steve Bartalo was the WAC's leading rusher in 1983 as a freshman with 1,113 yards in 10 games. And the Rams tightend Keli McGregor set a record for completions by a tightend with 69 last year were both walk-ons.

Utah tailback Eddie Lewis is a walk-on.

The list is long. Walk-ons undoubtedly have to work harder to make good than the player on scholarship, but some of them do. Their success undoubtedly inspires others to try.

Walk-ons will keep walking on.

INTRODUCING THE TIGER RX. THE FIRST RUNNING SHOE AS INDIVIDUAL AS YOUR ORTHOTIC THERAPY.

External reinforcement of the heel counter helps maintain the foot and the orthotic in proper alignment and helps reduce heel counter distortion.

Finally,

A running shoe that offers a healthy environment for a runner's foot and a prescription orthotic, too.

The answer didn't come easily. More than 2000 hours went into research and testing.

Six different generations were rejected. The shoe that emerged three years later "looks" like any other sophisticated running shoe. But that's where the similarity ends.

Now, for the first time, you can have a running shoe/practitioner prescribed orthotic system as individual as you are.

Considering the enormous stress jogging puts on the feet and legs, it's not surprising that runners are turning to podiatrists and other foot care specialists in extraordinary numbers.

The combination of professional foot care and biomechanically controlling prescription orthotic devices, together with the Tiger RX, can have a profound effect on a runner.

An increase in space in the metatarsal area and the toe box provides additional depth to accommodate the foot, the orthotic and an extension or insole, comfortably.

A reinforced lateral counter extends from the heel to the base of the fifth metatarsal bone to reduce lateral distortion of the shoe due to excessive varus influences.

Duo-Max™ midsole extends over two-thirds of the shoe for extra support. Made with two different densities of EVA memory formula for greater protection against over-pronation.

The Gage of Tulsa's Success

The Question: What major college quarterback's first career run from scrimmage was for a touchdown?

The Answer: Steve Gage.

The Question: What major college quarterback's first career pass was for a touchdown?

The Answer: Steve Gage.

A common name to University of Tulsa Golden Hurricane fans, perhaps will become a household name in the homes of millions of football fans in the next three years. University of Tulsa quarterback Steve Gage, not only accomplished the aforementioned task, but did more for the fortunes of TU football than one can imagine for a freshman quarterback.

Perhaps overlooked by the achievements of the Missouri Valley Conference's Offensive Player-of-the-Year Michael Gunter, who became Tulsa's all-time leading rusher with 3,536 career yards, Gage managed to put his name in the MVC record books as well. However, to hear Gage speak, one would never know that he earned conference Newcomer-of-the-Year honors.

"I'm not really concerned with the materialistic goals, such as all-conference or player-of-the-year honors," said Gage. Of course, he's proud of the accomplishment, but to think that he can sit back and rest on his laurels would be absurd. "Besides finishing the season at 11-0 and making a bowl appearance, the only other goal I want to achieve is to improve on my weaknesses and know that I played my best."

Entering fall practice last season, there appeared to be a logjam at the quarterback position with four candidates, senior Scott Brown, sophomore William Oliver and freshman redshirts Richie Stephenson and Gage vying for the starting spot. However, Gage didn't waste any time in staking claim to the starter's role. In the first fall intrasquad scrimmage, Gage, running the option, turned up field and scampered 63 yards for a touchdown on only the second play. He continued to impress the coaching staff and won the job at quarterback.

If his performance in fall practice didn't secure his starting position, then surely his showing in the 34-9 season-opening victory against San Diego State did. "I knew that if things didn't go as planned that someone else was coming in," Gage said. Much to Gage's liking, things went better than planned as he opened TU's scoring with a 49-yard touchdown jaunt in the first quarter on his first collegiate run from scrimmage. His first pass of the day was a 10 yard TD toss to fullback Brett White.

Gage is quick to point out that the success he encounters, as in that of his first college game, is the prime product of the Lord's love. "I was so nervous in that first game, but I gave the game to the Lord and said whatever is going to happen will," Gage said. "As Romans 8:28 says, everything works together for the good and those who love Christ are called according to His purpose."

A devout Christian, Gage is the president of the TU chapter of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

"The FCA and the Lord helps me to relax and the key to my playing is being relaxed," said Gage. "The FCA is an important part of my life both on and off the field. It creates a bond on the team."

Entrenched in the starter's role for the entire season, Gage was Tulsa's second-leading ground gainer rushing for 463 yards and two touchdowns. Although admitting that his major weakness is the passing game, he completed 52.4 percent of his passes on 66 of 126 for 876 yards and five touchdowns.

In his second appearance versus Arkansas, Gage proved that his performance the previous week was no fluke. He rushed for 112 yards including a 50-yard TD run, which was his longest rush from scrimmage of the year. An honorable mention all-MVC choice, Gage was voted the team's letterman star award for his showing against Illinois State, when he completed nine of 13 passes for 163 yards and touchdown passes of 47-yards to Greg Petty and a career long 54-yard toss to Keith Estes. Against Drake, he set career-highs of 13 completions for 216 yards.

An all-state quarterback at nearby Claremore High School, Gage remembers as a youngster watching former Dallas all-pro quarterback Roger Staubach. "He played with the kind of style I would like to be able to play," said Gage. "Besides his all-around play he was a good Christian man and his personal life was tops."

Gage chose TU after considering Oklahoma. "They were more interested in me as a defensive back," said Gage. But much to the delight of TU coaches and fans, Gage selected to redshirt a yard for the chance to play the position he's wanted all along.

Gage received his chance to play quarterback, but most important to him is that the Lord has given him the opportunity to make the most of this chance. TU head coach John Cooper smiles at the thought of Steve Gage making the most of his chance for the next three years. "The thing I like the most about him," said Cooper "is that he's going to keep getting better."

"Keith Christofferson tops nationwide consumer preference poll"

Recently, Chevrolet Motor Corporation conducted a nationwide poll designed to measure customer attitudes about Chevrolet's salespeople. Gene Harvey Chevrolet's Keith Christofferson received the highest marks in the country.

Keith Christofferson...Gene Harvey Chevrolet's award-winning salesman.

When I know the customers and they know me, it's easier for them to tell me what they really want. And I have a better chance of matching them with the car or truck that will make them the happiest." *

"Shopping for an automobile should be a pleasant experience and I try to make it that way. I have never used pressure to make a sale, and I never will. Using pressure is no way to sell cars, and especially, is no way to treat customers."

"I see to it that the customer gets exactly what he or she wants. My customers know I care about them and I know Gene Harvey Chevrolet cares about my customers because we don't forget about them once the sale is made."

"We have an award-winning service department which will help you keep your car running and looking like new for years to come."

BYU Head Coach LaVell Edwards

A look at BYU's football history shows there have been two distinct, contrasting eras—LaVell Edwards and pre-LaVell Edwards. As head coach of the Cougars, the 53-year-old Edwards has accomplished what many would have considered impossible when he accepted the position 13 years ago. He has transformed a program which managed only 171 victories and 16 winning seasons in its first 46 years to a program which has won 105 games, has claimed nine Western Athletic Conference championships and has appeared in eight bowl games in only 12 years. At the beginning of the 1984 season,

LaVell was ranked seventh in winning percentage (.734) among the nation's active football coaches. The Cougars and Nebraska were tied with more wins (51) than any other major schools over the last five years. A look at the 1983 season is a good example of how LaVell has established himself as one of the nation's premier football coaches. The Cougars finished the season with an 11-1 record and a seventh-place ranking in the polls. They won their eighth consecutive WAC championship by going undefeated (7-0) in conference play. Twice they beat opponents who finished the season in the top 20. And a last-second trick play in the Holiday Bowl gave BYU its third bowl victory in the last four years. Edwards had the opportunity to coach in three bowl games last year, and his teams won all three. Besides the Holiday Bowl, he coached the West teams in both the Hula and Japan bowls. Two of his players, Steve Young and Gordon Hudson, were named consensus All-Americans. A 1952 graduate of Utah State, Edwards has added a master's degree from the University of Utah (1960) and an Ed.D. from BYU (1978). The offensive philosophy practiced by Coach Edwards is one of high-powered offense and rugged defense. Under his guidance, BYU has led the nation in passing six times (1976, '77, '79, '80, '81 and '83), scoring (1979) and total offense (1979, '80 and '83).

In 1979, LaVell was recognized as national coach-of-the-year by two organizations: the Bobby Dodd Award Board and the Churchmen's Hall of Fame. Four times (1972, '79, '80 and '83) he has been selected WAC coach-of-the-year, and four times he has been Kodak District Eight coach-of-the-year (1974, '77, '79, '80). An all-conference center at Utah State, LaVell met his wife, the former Patti Covey in Logan. He later played on two service football teams before accepting a coaching job at Granite High School in Salt Lake City. He came to BYU as an assistant coach in 1962 and succeeded Tommy Hudspeth as head coach in 1972.

BYU Assistant Coaches

Ask a sportswriter how the team is going to do this year, and the response will likely include something about the number of starters returning, the key players who graduated, experience, etc. An important factor many people overlook is the experience of the coaching staff and the number of coaches returning. The ability to attract and keep outstanding coaches on the staff is one of the key reasons LaVell Edwards' team have won consistently. The staff returns virtually intact from the 1983 season. Coaching the receivers is Norm Chow, who has been with BYU for nine years. Chow was an All-WAC offensive guard at Utah (1967-68) before playing a year in the Canadian Football League. After his professional career, he coached at Hawaii's Wai'aleale High before moving to BYU. Chow has a master's degree from Utah and an Ed.D. from BYU. Dick Felt, defensive coordinator and assistant head coach, has been on the BYU staff for 18 years. He played his college ball at BYU, where attained all-conference honors as a running back and set several records. After playing service ball, he signed with the New York Titans and became an all-pro defensive back. He was later traded to the Boston Patriots and was again all-pro. Felt played in the first two AFL all-star games. He coaches defensive backs.

Entering his fifth season at BYU, Roger French is offensive coordinator and oversees the offensive line. French spent 14 years at Minnesota and Wisconsin before coming to BYU in 1980. He played linebacker, tight end and fullback at Minnesota and later played some pro ball with the Philadelphia Eagles and the Cleveland Browns. His first coaching job was at Memphis State, where he was defensive coordinator. Mike Holmgren, is responsible for coaching BYU's quarterbacks. Now in his third year at BYU, Holmgren played his college ball at USC with the likes of O. J. Simpson. He played for a short time with the New York Jets and the St. Louis Cardinals and eventually coached at Sacred Heart and Lincoln High Schools in California before moving to San Francisco State, where he was offensive coordinator and quarterback coach. Another veteran on the staff is Mel Olson, who works with the offensive line—centers in particular. Olson was an All-WAC player at BYU and accepted a job on the staff shortly after graduation. While coaching the Jayvee team several years ago, his teams were undefeated three seasons. Olson earned his Ed.D. at BYU, majoring in physical education and minoring in health education. Work on an advanced degree led to a job on the staff for Jim Paronto, who oversees the inside linebackers. He came to BYU from Adams State, where he was head football coach and athletic director. He got an Ed.D. from BYU in athletic administration with a supporting field in organizational behavior. Paronto was a former academic All-America quarterback at Adams State. Lance Reynolds, the newest member of BYU's staff, is beginning his second year as coach of BYU's running backs. The former All-WAC offensive tackle was a BYU standout before playing with the Pittsburgh Steelers and the Philadelphia Eagles. He later joined the coaching staffs at Ricks and Snow Colleges. A former all-conference tackle at Utah State, Tom Ramage now is responsible for BYU's defensive line. He began his coaching career at Bear River and later was an assistant at USU under Tony Knap. Later he went to Weber State to work with Sark Arslanian. In 1971, he became head coach at Dixie College and compiled a 13-7 record before coming to BYU. In Ken Schmidt BYU has on its staff one of the most successful high school coaches ever in Utah. Schmidt began as an assistant at Granite High and later took over the reins at Skyline High in Salt Lake, compiling a 105-24-1 record with five state championships. From Skyline, he took the head job at Ricks College, posting a 17-3 record in three years. At BYU he coaches the outside linebackers.

Cougar Stadium

General Information

As you can see, Cougar Stadium is one of the finest football facilities in the country. Following are a few facts about the stadium:

Seating Capacity: The stadium seats close to 65,000 spectators. There are 16,618 seats in the North stands, 16,661 in the South stands, 16,719 in the East and 14,930 in the West.

Largest Crowd: Cougar Stadium was sold out every game during its first two years. The single-game attendance record is 65,215 set in 1983 against Utah.

Press Box: The impressive press box facility, situated on the West stands, is 10 stories high. It comprises four levels and runs the entire length of the field. The first two levels are made up of loges—glass enclosed booths capable of seating up to 12 people. Each loge has a TV radio, refrigerator, sink and telephone hookup. There are 42 loges.

The President's Box is located on the first level and provides seating for about 163 people. The third level is for working press and can accommodate about 250 people. Television cameras are located on the fourth level. Situated inside two concrete towers are three elevators and a stairway that provide access to the press box.

Cougar Club Room: Located under the South end of the West stands, the Cougar Club Room is home of BYU's Athletic Hall of Fame. On game days, Cougar Club members can make reservations to attend a pre-game buffet and game briefing in the room, which can normally seat about 250 at tables but can be expanded to seat up to 440. The room is equipped with a good sound system, a video playback unit and several TV monitors. The KSL Radio post-game call-in show originates from the Cougar Club Room and is open to the public.

The room is also home of the Utah County Chapter of Cougar Club and is used for hosting recruits, team socials and Cougar Club Board of Directors meetings.

President's Reception Area: Adjacent to the Cougar Club Room is the President's Reception Room. It is used to host special guests of the University preceding each home game.

Playing Surface: The natural grass playing surface has a sand base, which is capable of draining up to 13 inches of rainfall per hour.

Stadium Policies

First Aid/Police: Stations are located under the West stands.

Game Programs: The "Cougar Illustrated" game program is available at several locations inside the stadium as well as numerous locations outside the stadium. Cost is $1.00.

Duplicate Tickets: The University cannot assume responsibility for tickets left at home, lost or stolen. However, duplicate tickets may be issued to the ticket patron or spouse if the seat location is on file at the Ticket Office. The charge for this service is $3.00 per ticket.

Activity Cards: BYU faculty, staff and student tickets should be accompanied by a current activity card. Faculty staff and student tickets are non-transferable to the public unless accompanied by a guest pass.

Wheelchairs: Wheelchairs must be located in designated wheelchair areas. Wheelchair tickets are non-transferable to other patrons.

Coolers and Baby Strollers: Large coolers and strollers will not be allowed inside the stadium.

Glass Bottles: No glass bottles will be allowed in the stadium.

Umbrellas: As a courtesy to others, the use of umbrellas is discouraged.

Children: Every person two years of age and older must have a ticket.

Radios: If you bring a radio, please be considerate of those around you and try to use earphones.

Signs: Signs, banners, pictures, etc., that are offensive to individuals and teams, that are not in good taste or create a safety hazard will not be allowed. The hanging or displaying of signs on any part of the stadium is prohibited as a safety precaution, to eliminate excessive cleanup and to avoid defacing of property with tape, glue, nails or other materials.

A Winning Combination

1983-84 MIDWEST DIVISION CHAMPIONS

Dale McCann lets the team know there are some BYU fans at the Pittsburgh game.

Behind most successful athletic programs, there is an equally successful booster organization providing the financial assistance and community support necessary to keep the program winning.

At BYU that organization is the Cougar Club. And Dale McCann is the man responsible for making Cougar Club function.

McCann came to BYU from General Dynamics in 1970. He began working in the Scholarships and Financial Aids Department. In 1972, he left the University to go to work for Signetics as that company's purchasing agent. However, he returned to BYU in 1974 as Coordinator of Gift Clubs.

His title was later changed to Director of Annual Giving for the LDS Foundation. As part of his responsibilities, he is Executive Director of the Cougar Club.

According to McCann, the Cougar Club has five main functions: To provide financial support for recruiting athletes and related booster activities; to provide moral support and volunteer assistance; to build and sustain athletic loyalty; to build and sustain club loyalty; and to provide recognition to administrators, coaches, players, volunteers, and noteworthy individuals outside the university.

To achieve these goals, the Cougar Club has various projects and events. Some of the more notable are the basketball varsity preview, the football pigskin preview, the BYU Athletic Hall of Fame, Club luncheons and the televising of BYU athletic events.

Benefits of joining Cougar Club, whose membership has grown to over 2,500, include priority seating at ball games, parking passes, press guides, a subscription to BYU Sports Magazine, plaques and Cougar mementos, tours, Cougar Club Room activities, Honor Roll listing, Club merchandise, tax deductions and access to a video tape library.

The most enjoyable part of his job, McCann says, is seeing the athletes that come to BYU get a "first-class opportunity to improve." Also, having a successful athletic program impacts the general fund raising efforts of the University, affects the attitude of alumni and enhances the school's image.

McCann knows from personal experience how a school's athletic program can help its graduates.

After graduating from BYU in 1966, he interviewed for a job at General Dynamics. Upon learning that Dale was from BYU, the interviewer spent the entire interview talking about BYU's NIT championship basketball team. When McCann got home, there was a telegram waiting with news he had been offered the job.

A survey recently conducted by the Alumni Association shows that 95 percent of alumni feel a winning athletic team will have a direct impact on fund raising efforts. The majority of alumni feel a winning program helps bring national recognition to the school, helps attract better students and helps attract better faculty. Over half said it makes students more marketable in the job market.

Although the fund raising aspect of Cougar Club is essential to BYU's athletic program, McCann sees another way the Club helps keep the winning tradition alive.

"It's not just the money. It's the moral support behind them," he says. "It's like a cheering section that's always behind them, not just during the game."

Dale and his wife, Andrea, are the parents of 10 children, five boys and five girls.

No one this week should be questioning whether or not the WAC can move the ball. Long noted as a wide-open league, WAC teams scored points and gained yards last weekend by the bushel full. New Mexico tallied 61 points and broke a 34-year-old record in piling up 663 total yards. Air Force set two records with 75 points and 585 yards. Utah amassed 408 yards and 40 points but fell short of a win. BYU hit for 524 total yards and 47 points on six TD passes from Robbie Bosco to dump Baylor. The average? The nine WAC teams on the weekend averaged 31.4 points with 283 being tallied.

Six teams are involved in conference play this weekend, two of them for the second time this season. Air Force takes its 10 game win string to Wyoming, Hawaii and Colorado State meet in Fort Collins, both looking to untie the strings holding back each team's offense while UTEP ventures to San Diego State.

Two WAC starting quarterbacks are doubtful for this Saturday after suffering injuries in last week's games. New Mexico's Buddy Funck received a head injury and was hospitalized overnight. The final diagnosis is a concussion and he's being listed as doubtful. Funck left the game late in the third quarter after throwing for 112 yards and two TDs plus running for 113 yards against Idaho State and his status for the game at San Diego State is up in the air. His replacement, John Scouler, came in and got a TD pass and guided the Miners downfield for a game winning field goal.

AF at WYO The battle of the wishbone. A matchup of this type is fast becoming a rarity around the country as a recent survey shows only five teams left using the bone as the primary offense. And this will be the only head-to-head match of two bone teams this regular season in Division I football. Both coaches, Fisher DeBerry of Air Force and Al Kincaid of Wyoming, shared ideas on the wishbone while they were assistants at their respective schools plus other universities in the South. Air Force now possesses the second longest win string in the country at 10 (BYU is first at 13) but one of its two losses a year ago was a 14-7 decision at Wyoming. The Cowboys hope to get untracked offensively after sputtering against South Dakota and Nebraska while the Falcons are coming off a record setting performance. The series is a tight one, AFA leads, 10-9-3 and the two have split the last four games.

UTEP at SDSU A win for either one in WAC play is just the transfusion the doctor ordered. In fact, UTEP has not won a WAC game since the season's finale in 1984 and the Aztecs haven't won a conference game since last year's 41-33 decision over the Miners. UTEP is a rapidly improving outfit. Defensively the Miners are fifth overall in the WAC and third against the rush (103.5). The Aztecs need to get untracked offensively, having tallied only three TDs by the offensive unit in two games. It will be a battle of young quarterbacks with SDSU's redshirt freshman Todd Santos going against either sophomore Sammy Garza, if his ankle heals, or newcomer John Scouler of the Miners.

UH at CSU Both Hawaii and Colorado State want to make amends for disappointing first weekend efforts. And they are looking to get off on the right foot in WAC play. Both clubs were given a lot of pre-season hoopla with regard to the league race and it appears that the one to get untracked offensively first will have a real shot at winning. Both struggled to move the ball last weekend, especially on the ground. Hawaii netted 63 yards on 33 tries while CSU got 105, 104 by Steve Bartalo in the rushing department. UH does boast quarterback Raphael Cherry and wide receiver Walter Murray while CSU counters with dual tight ends Keli McGregor and Harper LaBel.

UTAH at TENN Utah knows what it heads for in a trip to Tennessee this weekend. The Utes saw Washington State score 42 points on Utah after losing at Tennessee, 37-27. Utah's defense, without linebacker Mark Bloch who has missed two weeks with a hamstring pull, gave up 487 yards to the WSU Cougars. Tennessee was idle last weekend and owns a 2-0 series edge on the Utes. Utah's offense is well oiled but coach Chuck Stobaart obviously has concerns for his defense which is allowing 384 yards a game.

WTSU at UNM Just what the doctor ordered? With quarterback Buddy Funck doubtful due to a head injury, New Mexico would like to ease past 0-2 West Texas State without taking a chance on Funck's health in order to have him ready for Texas Tech and the WAC race. But who knows if the Buffaloes will cooperate? These two teams haven't met since 1950 when WTSU won over the Lobos for a fourth straight time and the Buffs lead in the series, 9-4. UNM's ground offense was devastating last weekend while the rushing defense allowed only 55 yards.

WIN SKEINS Now that Miami of Florida lost its 13 game win streak, the attention focuses to the WAC. BYU has the nation's longest string of consecutive wins at 13 and the second best streak belongs to Air Force at 10. Both teams have a lot of work ahead if they want to match streaks on Oct. 20 at Colorado Springs. BYU faces Tulsa, Hawaii, Colorado State and Wyoming while AFA must meet Wyoming, Utah, CSU, Navy and Notre Dame.

Pressure is no stranger to BYU senior golfer Keith Goyen.

When the 5-7 Arizonan arrived at BYU in the fall of 1981, the Cougars were defending NCAA champions and fans wanted more of the same in 1982. Last season was also pressure-packed with the Cougars spending much of the year ranked number one in the nation.

"People expected a lot out of us after the national championship," said Goyen. "There was a lot of pressure this last season, too, being the favorite in the NCAA tournament."

It's well the quiet senior is used to pressure because he'll be facing a considerable amount of it again this year. Goyen is one of only two seniors returning to this year's squad and will be expected to provide leadership for the extremely young 1984-85 team.

"I'm going to try to be a better leader, but I won't change my game any," he said.

Goyen came to BYU from Scottsdale, Ariz. Highly recruited by such perennial national powers as Arizona State and Wake Forest, Goyen was attracted to BYU by more than just its fine golf program.

"After my visit here I was really impressed with the atmosphere and location. I love the mountains and enjoy skiing," he said.

Goyen also likes the emphasis BYU puts on academics. He's a serious student and plans to postpone turning pro for a year so he can graduate.

Luck, with a little help from former Cougar Jimmy Blair, brought BYU and Goyen together. He was a senior in high school, leaning towards going to Arizona State, when he met Blair while both were attempting to qualify for the Tucson Open.

Neither Goyen nor Blair qualified for the tourney, but both BYU and Keith profited from the meeting.

"He (Blair) told me about BYU, then went back and told Coach (Karl) Tucker about me," said Goyen. "He sort of introduced us to each other."

Goyen comes by his golf talent naturally. His father, Hub, is a golf pro at a club in Scottsdale. Keith and his family lived near the golf course where his father worked. But even though he grew up around the sport, he wasn't forced into golf.

Senior Keith Goyen will be a leader on the golf team.

"Nobody ever pressured me into playing," he said. "I just decided I wanted to play when I was about five years old."

Goyen has been on BYU's traveling squad since his arrival in Provo, and his consistently good scores have contributed to Cougar victories for three years. His best year so far was as a sophomore when he won the Beehive Invitational in Logan and the Ute Invitational in Salt Lake City.

"I'm going to try to push myself harder this year because it's my last season," he said.

It looks like that goal is well within reach for him. Keith finished 10th last July in the prestigious Southwest Amateur in Tucson, Ariz., after taking most of the summer off.

"I was sort of burned out this summer after the disappointment of the NCAA championships (BYU placed fifth)," Goyen said. "But the finish in Tucson helped get me ready to start this year."

"We'll have a young team, but if we can come together we should be good," added Goyen.

Keith sees a number of parallels between this year's squad and the 1981 NCAA championship team. Like the team of '81 which had lost All-American Bobby Clampett, this season the squad will be without All-American Rick Fehr.

"We don't have any super stars this year," he said modestly. "But we've got a good blend of experience and youth, with good, solid players like they had in '81."

Cougar coach Karl Tucker will be glad to have Goyen's experience with pressure returning to help defend BYU's title in the William H. Tucker Invitational in Albuquerque, N.M. next week.

Tami Hamilton Sets Strategy

By Ellen Larsen
Women's Sports Information

Volleyball setter Tami Hamilton and her husband, defensive tackle Larry Hamilton, will say "aloha" to Hawaii in September but they won't be sunning on the beach together. Tami will be saying aloha-goodbye with other Cougar women spikers a few days before Larry says aloha-hello with the football squad. Although neither of them likes the long separations required by their schedules, both are committed team players.

Tami, a 5-10, 20-year-old senior elementary ed. major from Fountain Valley, Calif., who has been in the Islands for two weeks of pre-season practice and competition as BYU's No. 1 setter, says the strategy of setting a volleyball is similar to a play pattern in football.

"The hitters have to be in a specific place to get the ball. My job is to read the opponents' blockers and put up the ball in a variety of positions so my hitters have the best possible swings."

And if spectators remember Debbie Green of the U.S. Women's Olympic volleyball team, they know that the setter is the tactical and emotional floor manager of the squad.

"The setter calls the plays," says Tami, co-captain with Karen Doane of the 1984 Cougars. "What I set depends on my front line, the position of the blockers on the other team—whether they're inside or outside the block—and on how short or tall the players across the net are.

"The setter also pretty much determines the mood for the team," she says. "A volleyball team is so close that if I am off, the hitters are off. If the offensive begins to break down, it probably started with me.

"What I mainly try to do is give my hitters no blockers. I want to draw the opponents' blockers to a specific hitter on our side, and then set to another hitter

"I have no favorite play," Tami adds. "Each play works in a specific situation. Most spectators, though, prefer fake plays like the pump."

"We can usually pull off the pump when a middle blocker such as Karen Doane comes in for a one (a low set just a few inches above the net); then she moves down as though she's about to spring up to spike the low ball, then she hesitates as I set her a ball about four feet above the net. The object is to have the opposing blockers jump with the fake.

"Of course you can't use the pump too often because the opponents will read it," she says.

Coach Elaine Michaelis calls Tami one of the best setters in the country. "She has outstanding knowledge of the game and sets a very complicated quick offense. What's more, she's an exceptional blocker and plays strong defense."

Anyone who watches volleyball knows it's a game of momentum, and those who play the sport know that keeping momentum on their side is crucial to winning.

"My frustration comes when we lose momentum and have to try to get it back," says Tami. "Sometimes when we start losing momentum, we draw into ourselves. When I feel things slipping away I try to help my teammates loosen up. I usually kid with them—it helps to laugh off the tension. Chattering to each other helps. Of course, one great play can bring momentum back.

"Keeping everyone up will be especially important this year because we have a new team," she says. "And I'm optimistic. I've been here four years and this team is working harder than any other team I've been on. Everyone is giving her best."

Unlike the tight, zippered knee scars on some athletes, Craig Garrick's knee scar looks like the zipper is undone.

Players joke that Garrick's scars look like railroad tracks, and Craig tells people he was attacked by a shark. But whenever the BYU offensive guard obligingly raises his pant leg to show the wound, it looks like he has been in a sawmill accident.

In reality, the 6-5, 262, senior's scars are the result of seven separate knee operations, not to mention one shoulder operation. The way Garrick has countered the injuries is through plenty of exercise.

It's common knowledge the almost 25-year-old Garrick is the strongest man on the Cougar team, benching 450 pounds. Craig, who married Dana Chapman this past summer, has been lifting weights religiously for at least the past 10 years and that includes the time when he was serving a church mission in Florida, Georgia and Alabama.

During Garrick's church mission from 1980-81, he spent his free time contacting junior high school coaches and principals to arrange time for lifting in their weight rooms. He also lifted weights at Florida State University where Craig was almost persuaded to transfer because of the Seminoles' LDS offensive line coach.

Garrick had periodic contacts with BYU during his mission, the most memorable of which was the 1980 Holiday Bowl when the Cougars upset Southern Methodist University.

"I rode my bike around through the swamps of Milton, Fla., so I could watch the Holiday Bowl that night on a small black and white TV," said the exercise physiology major. "I watched the game to the end and I knew BYU would win. As I rode home that night I was so depressed."

Garrick was probably the only BYU fan who was depressed following the Miracle Bowl victory over SMU, but it was because he wasn't playing and his buddy Kyle Garrick celebrates with the team following the victory over Baylor.

Whittingham was doing so well.

Among the experiences Garrick had on his mission which took his mind off the depression caused by his knee included watching the hotdog vendor in Douglas, Ga., feed leftover hotdogs to an alligator named Charlie.

"We watched at the edge of this silent swamp which would come alive when the vendor whistled for Charlie," says Garrick of the hungry gator who would then slither through the lily pads. That experience would be cataloged for future reference by Garrick to be wary of defensive linemen lurking on the gridiron.

Garrick left Charlie and other mission field experiences behind when he returned home to Provo seven months early to have his seventh knee operation. So much of Craig's past 10 years revolve around his knee injuries, it behooves counting them.

Operation number one: was performed in 1976 following an injury on the basketball court during Craig's sophomore year at Provo High School. Because Garrick had lifted weights so much, when he went up for a dunk the leg muscles contracted and pulled two pieces of bone off the tibia. He had two screws put in during the operation, both of which were later removed. To this day, Garrick still dunks occasionally just to prove to doubters that the scarred knee still works.

Operation number two: was the result of the most devastating injury. It happened in September of 1977 at Springville when linebacker Garrick was victim of a crackback block. His mother, Janet, a nurse, observed this operation first hand when ligaments were reconstructed and cartilage was removed.

Craig estimates he has watched the 8 mm film clip of his major injury at Springville nearly 100 times before he recently returned the film back to Provo High. This past summer, the player who delivered the crushing blow to Garrick formally introduced himself to Craig for the first time.

Operations three, four, five and six: began four weeks after his September 1977 surgery because of infection in the knee. There was yellow pus oozing through his cast. When doctors opened up the cast, an eerie smoke belled forth and when it cleared, small cauliflower-like growths could be seen on the exposed bone in the unhealed wound. Craig couldn't take a step from September 1977 through July 4, 1978 because of the injury and operations.

He regained lost pounds through extensive weight training and sometimes consumes two milkshakes a day, made from a special protein drink. Sometimes Craig throws eggs into the mixture. Always he adds Nestle's Quick chocolate flavoring, even if the mixture is already flavored egg nog.

Operation number seven: was during the summer of 1981 when Garrick took a breather from his church mission and returned home to have a piece of floating bone removed from the knee. BYU center Bart Oates was in the hospital at the same time with elbow and ankle injuries. Oates would sit on the bedside of Garrick and cheer him up. Garrick then returned to the mission field to complete the remaining seven months of his mission.

Operation number eight: was on his shoulder following an injury he received playing against Ohio State in the 1982 Holiday Bowl.

When people call Craig raw-boned, it is literal because the gritty kid is playing bone upon bone without a cushion in one knee joint. The same knee, operated on seven times, cost an estimated $30,000, according to Garrick.

"The better I get as a player, the worse my knee injury seems to haunt me," says Garrick, a second-team All-Western Athletic Conference guard. "All the time I wonder how good I could have been. That is the hardest thing for me to cope with—wondering what I could have been."

Until he runs or walks, Garrick looks like a football specimen, size 18½-inch neck, 37-inch sleeves and a muscular frame above the torso. His upper body isn't a match for his legs. But the rusty-haired Garrick can ramble his bow-legged frame to the tune of 4.8 seconds in the 40 yard dash, which is one of the fastest offensive line times on the Cougar squad.

Even after his high school injury San Diego State's head coach Claude Gilbert flew to Provo to persuade Craig to become an Aztec. Gilbert's offer was enticing to an academic-minded Garrick, who has produced a series of semesters with a GPA over 3.0. But LaVell Edwards called from Los Angeles to offer a similar commitment to Garrick.

That was quite an investment for Edwards, because Garrick did not play a down of football for four years—from September 1977 until Craig returned from his mission.

While many athletes injured less severe than Garrick use a redshirt year to recuperate, Garrick says he has yet to use up his redshirt year.

"I spend less time in the training room than 90 percent of my teammates," says Garrick who administers much of his own hot and cold treatments to his throbbing knee after games. Games on astro-turf are more taxing on his knee than those on natural grass, but Craig says his better games seem to come on artificial turf.

Robbie Bosco has Garrick and his teammates on the offensive line to thank for his pass protection.

Garrick, whose workouts range from September to September does most of his training in the off-season. There are pleasures mixed in with these workouts, including six different ski trips to the snow-covered slopes within the last year.

During workouts with the BYU team, Garrick is often accused of holding, so his line coach Roger French ordered Craig to string on a pair of boxing gloves. The thumbs were even taped down on the gloves and still Garrick was accused of holding by his defensive teammates.

On the practice field, Garrick jokes he is a defensive lineman, where he was recruited to play. During this season's two-a-day practices, he drew a skull and crossbones on his white practice helmet, but the danger symbol wore off after two days of hitting. Craig later passed out stickers to the offensive and defensive line which read "no more Mr. Nice Guy."

When the time comes for football to end in the BYU co-captain's career, Garrick is interested in obtaining a master's degree, but he still plans on working out with his knee.

The WAC's Official Officials

So you want to be a college football official???

You just don't sit down in August, read the NCAA rule book, don the stripe shirt, clean out your whistle and head for the field.

No, there's a long progression of steps to be completed before you're qualified to take the field at a major college game and listen to the hoots and hollars emanating from the coaches, athletes and fans.

Western Athletic Conference Supervisor of Football Officials John Adams says there are very few shortcuts in that progression. He should know he worked the old Skyline Conference, the Big Eight and the WAC before turning in his whistle to become the supervisor.

What are those steps?

"Usually at the national level, a major college football official has worked eight years of varsity games at the high school level, five more years of college JV or small college games then works his way into a full major college assignment," says Adams.

"It also helps if the official has played college and perhaps some professional ball," Adams adds, "and a coaching background can be of assistance."

Now, what does the average official in the WAC look like?

He has 12.2 years of major college officiating under his belt, has worked 2.2 bowl or playoff games, is 47-years old, married, has an average of 3.2 kids, is 5-11 and 183-pounds, a college graduate who usually has an advanced degree (60 percent in the WAC do), is either a professional man or involved in the educational field and is very active in his community and church.

Of the 38 people working WAC games this fall, 95 percent played high school sports, 66 percent were involved in collegiate athletics as a player and 95 percent have at least a Bachelor's degree.

The Wac official must pass a physical, yearly rules test, attend the annual WAC rules clinic in the summer and during the season attend weekly clinics in his home area. The officials also participate in an ongoing physical conditioning program.

Next time you observe the officials at a WAC game, here's specifically what you will see:

Their ages run from 30 to 56, the years of major college officiating ranges from two to 25 years, 37 of the 38 are married, they have from zero (one official) to a high of six children (five officials), and have worked from zero to five bowl or playoff games.

Eight WAC officials own their own business and the total range of occupations goes from supervisory work with the telephone company to teachers, school administrators, high school coaches, parole officers, university professors, high tech business administrators, lawyers, construction company owners and presidents, banking officials including vice president, manufacturers, physical therapist, insurance, real estate and engineering.

Just being a family man and a collegiate football official involved in one of the above occupations should keep most folks busy enough, but WAC officials also give plenty to their community.

Outside activities range from city and county planning commissions to presidents of hospital associations, board members for banks and savings and loans, church deacons, parish council presidents, regional director of a church's education program, YMCA activities, chamber of commerce boards, university alumni association president plus involvement in such groups as city civic clubs, Muscular Dystrophy Association, Government Task Force on Alcohol Abuse, national school associations and even a six time prep state basketball coach of the year.

You know quite a bit now about the 38 men wearing stripe shirts in the WAC this fall. They are the happiest, however, when you can't remember they even were on the field that day. That means they called a good game and the issue was decided by the young men wearing the helmets, not by a whistle from an official.

Officials are at their best when they are in the background, hardly noticed by the fans.

The precision and finesse of 1984 national twirling champion Natalie Dutton Fullmer and the high-stepping pizzazz of the Cougarettes will be featured in today's halftime show with the Cougar Band.

Now in her fourth year as feature twirler with the band, Natalie put eight years of experience on the line this summer to bring home 14 trophies (eight first places in different twirling events) and the High Point Trophy in her division at the Universal Athletic Twirling Organization's National Summer Championship in Benton Harbor Mich.

She also won two queen titles and Model of the Year in conjunction with the twirling competition, which includes modeling and interviews along with demonstration of a variety of twirling skills.

A junior in illustration from Delta, Natalie won her best "trophy" late this summer when she married Cougar Band trumpet player David Fullmer. He's a junior in music education from Pleasant Grove and they want to work together in a good high school music program.

Natalie will be featured during the halftime show as the band plays "My Favorite Things."

For the Cougarettes, band director Dr. David Blackinton has created a special arrangement of "Blues in the Night" for the dance troupe.

Under the close scrutiny of veteran director Claudia Hyatt Rowley the Cougarettes have been working on today's show for the past three weeks, coming to Provo from all over the United States about two weeks before school started to become precise with their dance routines.

"We choreograph our dance movements to blend with the music, sometimes using special effects such as umbrellas, ribbons or capes to augment those movements," Mrs. Rowley said.

She is being assisted this year by three dance majors: Gina Durbano from Layton; Cindy Meadows, Holladay and Kim Jensen, Paradise Valley, Ariz.

Twirler Natalie Dutton Fullmer walked away with eight first-place trophies this summer

Under the direction of drum majors Brad Goodwin, Brett Skidmore and Jace McQuivey the Cougar Band will play the theme song of the movie "The Right Stuff" and the "Chimes Festival," a number based on the NBC network's chimes, during the colorful halftime show.

Augmenting the 200 instrumentalists are 22 flag team members under the direction of

Commandant Terri Britt, assisted by Kim Neeley

For the pre-game show beginning at 1:15 p.m., the band will present a fanfare combining the spirited "Cougar Song" and the traditional "College Song." Following the national anthem, the band will maneuver into block BYU letters and play the "Cougar Song."

Kyle Morrell and his defensive cohorts will have their first WAC test in Hawaii next week.

Next week the Cougars will be boarding the plane for the sun and surf of Hawaii. But you can bet BYU's players won't be spending much time in the famous sand, as it's time to get serious with the start of Western Athletic Conference play.

The game is doubly important for the Cougars because Hawaii was picked by most pre-season publications to give BYU a run for its money. However, the Rainbows got off to a slow start last week by losing to Cal-Fullerton 21-13.

A total of 14 starters return on the Rainbow team that finished at even .500 in 1983. Quarterback Raphael Cherry, who has set 22 school records, and his favorite receiver Walter Murray return this year to complete the famous "Cherry Bomb" connection.

Defensively the Rainbows are led by strong safety Rich Miano, who led the team in tackles last year and was voted first team All-WAC. He is joined by five other returning defensive starters.

Last year BYU and Hawaii did not play each other. And, in order to play them in the next few years, BYU will have to play the games in Honolulu through the 1980s.

One big advantage Hawaii has this year is its schedule. The Rainbows only play two road games. They are playing their first road game today at Colorado State. But they won't have to play away again until Oct. 13 when they go to UTEP.

For the Cougars, it will mean the end of a very difficult first four games. Following the Hawaii game, BYU takes a much-deserved bye to prepare for Colorado State in Fort Collins on Oct. 6.
