Today's Game

The seventh game of the World Series.

That's the phrase Coach LaVell Edwards has been using to describe how Utah State plays against the Cougars every year. And a look at the last couple of games between the two schools shows that's no overstatement.

Last year, you'll remember, Steve Young was knocked silly on the first BYU possession and played the entire game "out on his feet." BYU coaches still laugh about how he wouldn't run the plays they sent into the huddle. Still, he managed to score a touchdown with 11 seconds left to preserve the victory for BYU.

In 1982, Utah State played the Cougars in Logan on a miserable, cold day and pulled off a 20-17 upset. And the year before that, the Cougars came from behind to squeak out a 32-26 victory.

No one has played the Cougars with such intensity as has Utah State. And you can bet today will be no different.

Sure, the Aggies have won only once all year, that a 41-14 victory over Pacific. But Coach Chris Pella has claimed all along his team has talent. At the beginning of the year he had a hunch today's game might involve the Western Athletic Conference champion and the Pacific Coast Athletic Conference champion. That hunch was only half right. But you can bet the Aggies will be playing like they're the ones who are defending the No. 1 spot in the polls.

Leading the Aggie offense of late has been former BYU quarterback Gym Kimball. Last week, he set a school record with 57 passing attempts. His 37 completions also were a school record. Kimball would like nothing better than to defeat his old teammates on their home field on the last day of the regular season. Such an event would make the winter a lot more enjoyable to folks up in Cache Valley.

Here in Utah Valley, however, people aren't planning to spend all winter waiting to get revenge on Utah State next year. They hope to be celebrating a national championship—something the Cougars can control themselves.

Kurt Gonczon and the Cougar defense hope to pressure the Aggie quarterback today.

An impressive win today over Utah State and an impressive victory in the Holiday Bowl would just about assure BYU of a national championship. The Cougars would be 13-0 for the year and 24-1 for the past two years.

While today's game is chief in the minds of BYU's players, they also are awaiting word on who their next opponent will be. Rumors have been flying for weeks, but today the official word will be out. Early in the week, the speculation was that Auburn, if Florida was allowed to play in the Sugar Bowl, was the main candidate to be the Cougars' next foe in Holiday Bowl VII.

Today's game also marks another milestone for BYU. Over 966,000 fans have seen BYU play in Cougar Stadium since the facility was expanded in 1982. The sell-out crowd today means the attendance figure will surpass the one million mark.

BYU officials plan to honor the millionth fan, identified as he/she walked through the gate before the game, during a short halftime ceremony. The millionth fan will receive a trip for two to the Holiday Bowl courtesy of Western Airlines and Tour West Travel Agency, a 13-inch color television set courtesy of Jack Duckett Television and Appliance, an AM stereo radio from KSL Radio and a wool blanket from the BYU Alumni Association.

While Aggie fans are cheering for the year's biggest upset, BYU faithful hope to be chanting, "We're No. 1" following today's game.

Last Week

"After a wild day in college football Saturday, it's gut-check time for the national pollsters.

"And the big question in Utah Valley—and around the country—is: will the pollsters have the guts to give BYU what it has earned?"

Dorothy Knoell
Provo Daily Herald

"Robbie Bosco had his worst day this year. BYU coughed up the ball twice on fumbles and three more times on interceptions. But, when you're on a roll, there's no place for getting off, and the Cougars weren't. Saturday's 24-14 win over Utah moved BYU to 11-0 on the year and boosted its winning streak to 22 games."

Brad Rock
Deseret News

"In a magical suspended moment when it could have been when the University of Utah could have actually whipped Brigham Young University in a football game in modern times the Cougars said simply, 'Wait a minute, we're in charge here.'"

Dick Rosetta
Salt Lake Tribune

To BYU faithful who stuck around for all the lean years when the Cougars were everybody's doormat, last week must have seemed like a miracle, something that couldn't possibly have happened.

Not only did the Cougars defeat their archrivals up north, but also they inherited the number one position in the polls. The (ahem) national championship might be only two victories away for BYU.

In a day when upsets were happening every time you turned the dial on your television set, it looked like BYU might follow the fad and succumb to the Utes.

Glen Kozlowski was sensational against Utah, catching eight passes for 162 yards.

Untypically, BYU turned the ball over five times.

Once again, the defense was called upon to rescue the offense. And once again it rose to the challenge. The powerful Utah running attack was held to 202 yards. And Mark Stevens was held under the .500 percent mark in his passing. Most important, however, was that the defense kept the Utes out of the end zone when it had to.

The Cougar offense, despite the turnovers, piled up some impressive statistics. Bosco's passing was 27 of 44 for 367 yards. And Lakei Heimuli rushed for 117 yards on 17 carries.

By halftime, BYU had learned of South Carolina's demise, and the Cougars knew a win would give them at least the No. 2 spot in the polls. Then, while Coach LaVell Edwards and Paul James were finishing their radio call in show, Oklahoma did the Cougars a huge favor and stifled No. 1 Nebraska, opening the door to the Cougars.

For the first time in the school's history, the Nebraskas, the Oklahomas, the Alabamas, the Penn States, the Southern Cals, the Washingtons—everyone—was chasing the Cougars.

The Season's BEST and WORST

By Doug Robinson
Deseret News Sports Writer

This being the final regular-season football game of the year, it's time to wrap up another college football season. So here it is, the best, the worst, the highlights, the lowlights, the leftover notes, quotes and anecdotes, all in memory of a memorable (at least for BYU fans) 1984 college football season.

Best addition to Cougar Stadium—Caffeine-free Coke.

Best National Anthem—No contest. Charlie Daniels (BYU vs. Air Force).

Best nickname—Clemson's 320-pound noseguard William "The Refrigerator" Perry; or "G.E." for short.

Worst outburst of honesty—BYU tackle Louis Wong, who admitted in a TV interview that he regularly used holding tactics.

Worst prediction—to Sports Illustrated, which picked BYU to finish third and New Mexico first in the WAC. This wasn't as bad as Playboy picking BYU to finish sixth last year, but at least in this case it was understandable. The magazine doesn't exactly do big business in Provo.

The Curt Gowdy Trophy for hard-to-pronounce names (or Paul James' worst nightmares)—Players division: BYU's Lakei Heimuli, Vai Sikahema, Tom Tuipulotu, Baylor's Tom Muecke (how they get Mickey out of that, no one's sure), and CSU's Sanjay Beach (careful how you say that). For more, see Hawaii's entire roster. Coaches' division: Air Force's Fisher DeBerry—or is it Berry DeFisher? Also, BYU's LaVell Edwards—or is it Ladell?

Best play-calling by an offensive lineman—Louis Wong, who, after being threatened across the line by a Pitt player, called for slide blocking in which the offensive line moves over one man. "Robert Anae got his lights knocked out," says Edwards.

Silliest preseason hype—Pitt's offensive tackle Jim Fralic for Heisman.

Best imitation of Animal House—BYU's in-flight pillow fights.

Unluckiest team—Utah.

Best clutch team in the country—BYU, which has come from behind to win four games.

Worst questions to ask BYU coach LaVell Edwards— 1) Did you run up the score and/or why did you leave your starting quarterback in so long? 2) Do your offensive linemen hold? 3) What's the point spread this week? 4) Do returned missionaries give you an advantage?

Block of the year—To wide receiver Glen Kozlowski, who hit Wyoming's Pete Benedetti head-on and actually lifted him off the ground to spring David Mills for a touchdown.

The Butch Johnson Award for End Zone Antics—To Glen Kozlowski for his high fives of end zone fans and his quick-draw, smoking gun act.

Worst play of the year—Utah quarterback Mark Stevens, whose pitch out was intercepted by Wyoming's Pete Benedetti and returned for a game-winning TD.

Best play of the Year—BYU safety Kyle Morrell for his leap-and-flip tackle of Hawaii's Raphael Cherry on a quarterback sneak at the goal line.

Most overrated player in the WAC—Hawaii quarterback Raphael Cherry

Flake of the year—Ex-Cougar, current Aggie Gym (that's G-Y-M) Kimball, who eats grasshoppers. Raw

Best interviews—Gym Kimball, Glen Kozlowski, Mark Allen, Craig Garrick. Special mention: Louis Wong.

Worst interview—Doug "Wake me when it's over" Scovil, the San Diego State coach.

National Nice-Guy of the Year—USU coach Chris Pella.

The First Louis Wong Foot-In-Mouth award—To CSU quarterback

The "Play of the Year" goes to Kyle Morrell's tackle in Hawaii.

Tom Thenell, who shoved and taunted BYU's Kyle Morrell during the coin toss and then completed all of 9 of 24 pass attempts for 98 yards and lost 52-9.

Most unsung/underrated player at BYU—Brad Smith. Who?

Luckiest play—Robbie Bosco's 54-yard TD pass against Air Force. The pass was intended for Kozlowski, but it was caught by Mills.

GQ's Man of the Year—Jim Herrmann, who once wore a shirt so wrinkled on the team plane that

Edwards asked him, "Did you get that off the bottom of the laundry bag?" Runnerup—ex-Cougar Steve Young, who's high-top sneakers will have to be surgically removed someday

Biggest win of the Year—Pitt.

Most overrated teams—Pitt, Auburn, Michigan, Notre Dame, Mondale-Ferraro.

The Vidal Sassoon Trophy winner—Ladd Akeo and his heavily greased hair, which, if nothing else, almost certainly makes it easy to get (slide?) his helmet on and off.

The Pepto Bismal Award winner—To Pitt coach Foge Fazio, who said the loss to BYU made him throw up the next day

Worst new sports cliches—Any variation on the theme of "busters," as in "Cougarbusters," "The right stuff," "The Force," and, heaven forbid, "Where's the beef?"

Best suggestion of the year—from UTEP coach Bill Yung, who said, "BYU should go to the Pac-10 like Arizona and Arizona State."

Most over-run overworked instant replay—The winning TD pass in the '83 Holiday Bowl, which replaced the SMU miracle catch of Holiday Bowl III. Runnerup: Sharlene Wells, Clara Peller

Best scheduling job in the nation—Hawaii (nine home games).

Most Wishy-Washy—To the Holiday Bowl, which, essentially, wants to be associated with the Robbie Bosco, who has promised to take the offensive line out to dinner after the season.

Saddest revelation of the year—Mike Rozier's admission that he accepted money while at Nebraska, a confession that if made a year ago would have given the Heisman Trophy to Steve Young.

Worst road team in America—Utah, which has proven that there really is no place like paper's other writers. Reporter: "OK, what's your number?" Player: "63." Reporter: "I mean your telephone number."

Best imitation of Del Rodgers—Utah's Eddie Johnson.

Worst prime-time disaster—ESPN proudly presents BYU at New Mexico.

Most embarrassing moment—BYU trainer Marv Roberson falling flat on his face in front of 50,000 Hawaii

"Most underrated" of BYU's players was nose tackle Brad Smith.

WAC, as long as the winner is always BYU, and while it wants BYU, it doesn't want it too often, unless of course it ranks among the nation's top 5. Get all that? Runnerup: the wire service polls, which yanked BYU up and down in the polls like a yo-yo.

Surprise team of the year—TCU, runnerup: BYU

Best PR move—To quarterback home.

Fad of the year—The Wave. Honorable mention: the throwing of tortilla shells at Cougar Stadium.

The Dumb Jock Award (given to the local college football player who did the most to reinforce this stereotype)—It seems this player walked into a student newspaper office and asked a reporter if he could leave a message for one of the fans while running onto the field to retrieve an injured player

Quote of the Year—LaVell Edwards, commenting on all the national press BYU has received this year: "It's like discovering Willie Nelson after he's been singing 20 years." Runnerup: "Why would anyone schedule BYU for homecoming?"—several reporters at the BYU-CSU game.

Utah State's Hometown Boy

There's never been a "Hometown boy makes good story" better than the one about Utah State's Hal Garner, a 223-pound outside linebacker and the school's all-America candidate this fall.

Garner is from Logan. A town of its size (23,000) rarely produces athletes of all-America calibre. But Garner is of that ilk; he was the most talked about football player to come out of Logan High since the Olsen Brothers (Merlin and Phil) in the late 1950s and 60s.

Cache Valley-bred, he was one of the first in line—a charter member—of the first little league football program in the city of Logan at nine years of age (1972). He's played the sport every year since, earning unanimous all-state accord while leading the Grizzlies to their first state title since Merlin's team reached the finals in the 50s.

The accomplishments of a brilliant high school career (as a defensive back, primarily) were enough to earn him a national reputation. Recruiters were abundant.

Then, when word circulated Southern Cal's football coaches were vitally interested in him, "I didn't get as many calls all of a sudden," said Hal.

He made a visit to Los Angeles, anguished for awhile over the decision, then realized he was never destined to play football anywhere else but USU. (His father had been a member of Aggie teams of the early 1950s).

Thus began the career of a four-year starter.

"To play this game at an all-America level," said Aggie Head Coach Chris Pella, "you've got to have certain physical characteristics. And, believe me, if you drew up 'specs' for the ideal outside linebacker, Hal comes as close as you'll find. He's big (6'5", 223), strong and fast (4.5 seconds over 40 yards.)

"And, he has what the great ones have: that burning in his heart. He's never satisfied. When he became a starter he wanted to be all-conference; when he made all-conference he set his sights on all-America."

An all-PCAA selection a year ago,

Hal Garner has been terrorizing opposing offenses for four years.

Hal was elected one of the Aggies' co captains during spring drills. He was USU's leading returning tackler coming into the 1984 season. Aggie coaches consider him to be the most physically talented athlete to play at outside linebacker at the school in at least a decade.

How have things worked out for the Aggie linebacker? Has he regretted turning down John Robinson's invitation to join the USC program?

"Not for a minute," said Garner "Except for an injury which wiped out the 1981 season for me, it's been a great experience playing here. Besides, I probably would have been lost in the shuffle at USC."

Considering his accomplishments of four years at USU, that's not likely

"American Fork's Gene Harvey wins satisfied customer competition"

The results are in. Gene Harvey Chevrolet came out on top again. Out of 122 car dealers in the west, Gene Harvey ranked first with the highest percentage of satisfied customers.

Gene Harvey's Chevrolet Dealership.. 27 years serving your automotive needs

How does Gene Harvey do it? First: they care. They've learned that having happy customers makes a business more profitable than having unhappy customers. And while making their customers the most satisfied, Gene Harvey has built Utah Valley's largest volume car dealership.

Second: They make sure you get what you're looking for New car? New truck? Used car or truck? What's your price range? What kind of equipment do you really need?

BYU Head Coach LaVell Edwards

A look at BYU's football history shows there have been two distinct, contrasting eras—LaVell Edwards and pre-LaVell Edwards. As head coach of the Cougars, the 53-year-old Edwards has accomplished what many would have considered impossible when he accepted the position 13 years ago. He has transformed a program which managed only 171 victories and 16 winning seasons in its first 46 years to a program which has won 105 games, has claimed nine Western Athletic Conference championships and has appeared in eight bowl games in only 12 years. At the beginning of the 1984 season,

LaVell was ranked seventh in winning percentage (.734) among the nation's active football coaches. The Cougars and Nebraska were tied with more wins (51) than any other major schools over the last five years. A look at the 1983 season is a good example of how LaVell has established himself as one of the nation's premier football coaches. The Cougars finished the season with an 11-1 record and a seventh-place ranking in the polls. They won their eighth consecutive WAC championship by going undefeated (7-0) in conference play. Twice they beat opponents who finished the season in the top 20. And a last-second trick play in the Holiday Bowl gave BYU its third bowl victory in the last four years. Edwards had the opportunity to coach in three bowl games last year, and his teams won all three. Besides the Holiday Bowl, he coached the West teams in both the Hula and Japan bowls. Two of his players, Steve Young and Gordon Hudson, were named consensus All-Americans.

A 1952 graduate of Utah State, Edwards has added a master's degree from the University of Utah (1960) and an Ed.D. from BYU (1978). The offensive philosophy practiced by Coach Edwards is one of high-powered offense and rugged defense. Under his guidance, BYU has led the nation in passing six times (1976, '77, '79, '80, '81 and '83), scoring (1979) and total offense (1979, '80 and '83).

In 1979, LaVell was recognized as national coach-of-the-year by two organizations: the Bobby Dodd Award Board and the Churchmen's Hall of Fame. Four times (1972, '79, '80 and '83) he has been selected WAC coach-of-the-year, and four times he has been Kodak District Eight coach-of-the-year (1974, '77, '79, '80).

An all-conference center at Utah State, LaVell met his wife, the former Patti Covey, in Logan. He later played on two service football teams before accepting a coaching job at Granite High School in Salt Lake City. He came to BYU as an assistant coach in 1962 and succeeded Tommy Hudspeth as head coach in 1972.

BYU Assistant Coaches

Ask a sportswriter how the team is going to do this year, and the response will likely include something about the number of starters returning, the key players who graduated, experience, etc.

An important factor many people overlook is the experience of the coaching staff and the number of coaches returning. The ability to attract and keep outstanding coaches on the staff is one of the key reasons LaVell Edwards' team have won consistently. The staff returns virtually intact from the 1983 season.

Coaching the receivers is Norm Chow, who has been with BYU for nine years. Chow was an All-WAC offensive guard at Utah (1967-68) before playing a year in the Canadian Football League. After his professional career, he coached at Hawaii's Waialua High before moving to BYU. Chow has a master's degree from Utah and an Ed.D. from BYU.

Dick Felt, defensive coordinator and assistant head coach, has been on the BYU staff for 18 years. He played his college ball at BYU, where attained all-conference honors as a running back and set several records. After playing service ball, he signed with the New York Titans and became an all-pro defensive back. He was later traded to the Boston Patriots and was again all-pro. Felt played in the first two AFL all-star games. He coaches defensive backs.

Entering his fifth season at BYU, Roger French is offensive coordinator and oversees the offensive line. French spent 14 years at Minnesota and Wisconsin before coming to BYU in 1980. He played linebacker, tight end and fullback at Minnesota and later played some pro ball with the Philadelphia Eagles and the Cleveland Browns. His first coaching job was at Memphis State, where he was defensive coordinator.

Mike Holmgren, is responsible for coaching BYU's quarterbacks. Now in his third year at BYU, Holmgren played his college ball at USC with the likes of O. J. Simpson. He played for a short time with the New York Jets and the St. Louis Cardinals and eventually coached at Sacred Heart and Lincoln High Schools in California before moving to San Francisco State, where he was offensive coordinator and quarterback coach.

Another veteran on the staff is Mel Olson, who works with the offensive line—centers in particular. Olson was an All-WAC player at BYU and accepted a job on the staff shortly after graduation. While coaching the Jayvee team several years ago, his teams were undefeated three seasons. Olson earned his Ed.D. at BYU, majoring in physical education and minoring in health education.

Work on an advanced degree led to a job on the staff for Jim Paronto, who oversees the inside linebackers. He came to BYU from Adams State, where he was head football coach and athletic director. He got an Ed.D. from BYU in athletic administration with a supporting field in organizational behavior. Paronto was a former academic All-America quarterback at Adams State.

Lance Reynolds, the newest member of BYU's staff, is beginning his second year as coach of BYU's running backs. The former All-WAC offensive tackle was a BYU standout before playing with the Pittsburgh Steelers and the Philadelphia Eagles. He later joined the coaching staffs at Ricks and Snow Colleges.

A former all-conference tackle at Utah State, Tom Ramage now is responsible for BYU's defensive line. He began his coaching career at Bear River and later was an assistant at USU under Tony Knap. Later he went to Weber State to work with Sark Arslanian. In 1971, he became head coach at Dixie College and compiled a 13-7 record before coming to BYU.

In Ken Schmidt BYU has on its staff one of the most successful high school coaches ever in Utah. Schmidt began as an assistant at Granite High and later took over the reins at Skyline High in Salt Lake, compiling a 105-24-1 record with five state championships. From Skyline, he took the head job at Ricks College, posting a 17-3 record in three years. At BYU he coaches the outside linebackers.

Cougar Stadium

General Information

As you can see, Cougar Stadium is one of the finest football facilities in the country. Following are a few facts about the stadium:

Seating Capacity: The stadium seats close to 65,000 spectators. There are 16,618 seats in the North stands, 16,661 in the South stands, 16,719 in the East and 14,930 in the West.

Largest Crowd: Cougar Stadium was sold out every game during its first two years. The single-game attendance record is 65,215 set in 1983 against Utah.

Press Box: The impressive press box facility, situated on the West stands, is 10 stories high. It comprises four levels and runs the entire length of the field. The first two levels are made up of loges—glass enclosed booths capable of seating up to 12 people. Each loge has a TV, radio, refrigerator, sink and telephone hookup. There are 42 loges.

The President's Box is located on the first level and provides seating for about 163 people. The third level is for working press and can accommodate about 250 people. Television cameras are located on the fourth level. Situated inside two concrete towers are three elevators and a stairway that provide access to the press box.

Cougar Club Room: Located under the South end of the West stands, the Cougar Club Room is home of BYU's Athletic Hall of Fame. On game days, Cougar Club members can make reservations to attend a pre-game buffet and game briefing in the room, which can normally seat about 250 at tables but can be expanded to seat up to 440. The room is equipped with a good sound system, a video playback unit and several TV monitors. The KSL Radio post-game call-in show originates from the Cougar Club Room and is open to the public.

The room is also home of the Utah County Chapter of Cougar Club and is used for hosting recruits, team socials and Cougar Club Board of Directors meetings.

President's Reception Area: Adjacent to the Cougar Club Room is the President's Reception Room. It is used to host special guests of the University preceding each home game.

Playing Surface: The natural grass playing surface has a sand base, which is capable of draining up to 13 inches of rainfall per hour.

Stadium Policies

First Aid/Police: Stations are located under the West stands.

Game Programs: The "Cougar Illustrated" game program is available at several locations inside the stadium as well as numerous locations outside the stadium. Cost is $1.00.

Duplicate Tickets: The University cannot assume responsibility for tickets left at home, lost or stolen. However, duplicate tickets may be issued to the ticket patron or spouse if the seat location is on file at the Ticket Office. The charge for this service is $3.00 per ticket.

Activity Cards: BYU faculty, staff and student tickets should be accompanied by a current activity card. Faculty, staff and student tickets are non-transferable to the public unless accompanied by a guest pass.

Wheelchairs: Wheelchairs must be located in designated wheelchair areas. Wheelchair tickets are non-transferable to other patrons.

Coolers and Baby Strollers: Large coolers and strollers will not be allowed inside the stadium.

Glass Bottles: No glass bottles will be allowed in the stadium.

Umbrellas: As a courtesy to others, the use of umbrellas is discouraged.

Children: Every person two years of age and older must have a ticket.

Radios: If you bring a radio, please be considerate of those around you and try to use earphones.

Signs: Signs, banners, pictures, etc., that are offensive to individuals and teams, that are not in good taste or create a safety hazard will not be allowed. The hanging or displaying of signs on any part of the stadium is prohibited as a safety precaution, to eliminate excessive cleanup and to avoid defacing of property with tape, glue, nails or other materials.

The Invisible Cougar

When LaRae Hawkins was hired by BYU's Ticket Office to help type envelopes for basketball season tickets 12 years ago, little did she realize she would eventually end up working with general authorities, university presidents and the like.

LaRae (who also answers to LaRue, LeRoy, LaVern or any other name beginning with the letter "L.") currently serves as Administrative Assistant to Scott Williams, Director of Special Events. Her current responsibilities include working with coaches, players, the President's Office, the Cougar Club, the Development Office and other departments with special ticket needs.

As with most jobs, LaRae's has its pros and cons. Some of the pros include working with interesting people.

"I enjoy working with so many great people such as the LaVell's and the Ladell's, the players and the patrons," she says.

Over the years, LaRae has developed close friendships with players and their families. She keeps in touch regularly and occasionally pays them a visit when she's on vacation.

If BYU is invited to a bowl game, LaRae likes to go along to handle the myriad of ticket problems and requests that creep up. Every chance she gets, she travels to away games so she can enjoy the games rather than work.

However, before people start to say, "LaRae has the best job at BYU," they ought to know some of the challenges she faces almost daily.

As a Ticket Office employee, LaRae is constantly barraged with requests for tickets. She gets calls at home at all hours of the day or night from people wanting to know if she can get them "good" tickets. Everyone wants to be an exception and receive special privileges.

Some people, when turned down in their requests for "better" or "good" seats, blame LaRae personally. She sometimes gets letters or phone calls from people who are angry that their requests to have season tickets moved to the 50-yard line or midcourt are turned down. They don't realize those seats are taken and probably will be for the next 50 years.

Before becoming Administrative Assistant, LaRae was Ticket Office secretary and Ticket Manager. Many people don't know she no longer is Ticket Manager, but Larry Duffin has held that position since 1982. As a result, people often call the Ticket Office and will wait to talk to LaRae, even though any of the Ticket Office employees can usually help them. If someone were to tape together all the phone messages she receives, they could easily wallpaper the Marriott Center—inside and out.

In her 13 years as a Ticket Office employee, LaRae has seen a great change in the ticketing process. Most of it has come about because of the expanded stadium and winning programs.

In the "olden" days, the Ticket Office kept boxes of cards containing important information about season ticket patrons. Everything was done by hand. As ticket demands grew, so too did the need for a more effective method of handling tickets and information.

Computers took the place of the boxes, and now everything from assigning, printing and sorting tickets is done on the computer. LaRae has two terminals on her desk, to go along with a bowl that is usually full of candy or nuts for her many visitors.

LaRae accompanied her parents to Iran for two years, and while there worked in the U.S. Embassy office. When she returned to Utah, she enrolled at BYU. After graduation, she worked as a secretary to Sam Brewster and Harold Anderson in Physical Plant.

LaRae is married to Harold Hawkins, a former BYU football player. They have three married daughters: Anne Liechty, a beautician; Kim Scott, who works in Admissions at BYU; and Lynne Glassford, a BYU student. They also have two "super" grandchildren.

Regardless of national polls this week, Brigham Young University has achieved several milestones this season. Last week the Cougars set a WAC record for consecutive victories with 22, also the nation's current longest win skein. The old WAC record was 21 set by Arizona State in the 1969-71 period, during which, incidentally, the Sun Devils were striving for national acceptance, much the same as the present day Cougars. The WAC did not have a bowl tie-up at that time and the unbeaten 1970 ASU team literally had to struggle to convince the Peach Bowl that a WAC team was acceptable. ASU did just that, beating North Carolina, 48-26, in an Atlanta snowstorm. Now BYU is trying to convince the nation it might be the best team around. All the Cougars have done is be the only unbeaten and untied team left, are ranked No. 1 in NCAA total offense and passing and number two in scoring while quarterback Robbie Bosco is the nation's total offense and pass efficiency leader. Regardless of the ranking by the wire service polls, it will be the highest ever for the Cougars. Last week's third place spot had been the best ever for BYU. A little more history. BYU is not a Johnny-come-lately. Coach LaVell Edwards has been there 13 years. The first year was 7-4 in 1972 then BYU's last sub .500 year, a 5-6 mark in 1973. The commitment to the passing game was complete in 1974 and with one exception (1975), BYU has had 10 WAC titles under Edwards, nine in a row for the second longest conference win streak ever. This season for BYU and Edwards is the reward for a long campaign of victories and refinement of an offensive system that has led the nation in passing seven of the last nine years. That's consistency in anyone's book.

AFA at UTEP: Air Force hopes to keep bowl hopes alive. UTEP would like nothing better than to finish 1984 with two wins in a row. The Falcons were idle last week but enter the Miner fray with the nation's third best rushing offense (301.6). UTEP's win over Wyoming broke a 14-game WAC losing streak, the last win in league play also coming against the Cowboys at the close of '82. Air Force hopes to have stellar defensive tackle Chris Funk healthy in this fourth meeting of the two. AFA has won all three previous games.

UNM at UH: It's like starting over for Hawaii who hasn't played since November 3. New Mexico got quarterback Buddy Funck back last week and the offense started over for the Lobos. UNM hadn't tallied a touchdown in 14 quarters until Funck, complete with a protective cast over his broken leg bone, tallied six in the second quarter last week against San Diego State. Hawaii's offense began to click before the layoff and coach Dick Lakei Heimuli rushed for 117 yards vs. Utah.

Tomey hopes it hasn't gone stale as the Rainbow Warriors are riding high on a six game win streak. UH leads in the series, 6-3, and the two have split the last games, each winning on their home turf.

USU at BYU: Automatic? No way say longtime watchers of the Utah State-BYU series. Utah State may be 1-9 but the Aggies save it all for the Cougars. BYU escaped last year with a 38-34 win as Robbie Basco had to rescue a groggy Steve Young. In 1982, Utah State prevailed, 20-17. Aggies lead in the series, 33-24-3 and will be quarterbacked by BYU transfer Gym Kimball who has plenty to prove to his old school. BYU should be ready with a chance to put together its second unbeaten regular season ever, the first was in 1979 (but BYU lost to Indiana in the Holiday Bowl).

LBSU at SDSU: These West Coast neighbors collide to conclude 1984. Long Beach State is led by quarterback Doug Gaynor who is No. 2 nationally in total offense and No. 10 in pass efficiency. SDSU would like to conclude with two straight wins and another solid performance from freshman quarterback Todd Santos. The Aztecs remember the 49ers 20-13 win a year ago and hope to improve on a SDSU 13-9 series edge.

Guard Chris Nikchevich plans to help the Cougars take off this year.

The last game of football season can mean only one thing, basketball season is just around the corner.

In fact, basketball fans will have an opportunity to whet their appetites tonight at the Cougar Club's annual Varsity Preview at 7:30 p.m.

A courtside fireside featuring several members of BYU's basketball team will precede the intrasquad scrimmage at 6 p.m. Youth groups and their advisors will be admitted free to the fireside and the preview (advisors must bring the letter sent to their Bishops by the Cougar Club). Admission is $1 for the general public.

Coach Ladell Andersen will unveil his young squad during tonight's scrimmage. The team features six returning lettermen plus eight new faces.

Gone from last year's team are graduates Devin Durrant, Brett Applegate and Kevin Nielsen. Mike Smith, Jim Usevitch, Brian Taylor and Alan Astle are absent due to mission calls. Carl Pollard, the 7-2 sophomore center, announced a couple of weeks ago he, too, would be leaving after this semester on a mission.

The experience of this year's team will revolve around the guard line. Leading the way is three-year starter Scott Sinek, who averaged 7.5 points per game last season. Coach Andersen calls him "one of the best defensive guards in the country."

Senior Marty Perry and junior Chris Nikchevich are a couple of guards who saw lots of playing time last year. Perry averaged 2.8 points and three assists per game, while Nikchevich added 6.8 points per game. Richie Webb, a 6-5 guard, averaged 0.8 points per game during the limited action he saw last year.

Redshirt Timo Saarelainen is returning after playing with the Finnish Olympic team last year. He will be counted on to pick up some of the offensive burden carried by Durrant and Applegate last year.

Most hurt by graduation and mission calls was the Cougars' inside game. To help sure up this area, Andersen went to the junior college ranks. Tom Gneiting, a 6-10 center, played a year at Ricks College and averaged 8.4 points and 8.4 rebounds before serving an LDS mission. Another Ricks product is 6-8 center Bryan Fink, who poured in 15.1 points per game last year at Rexburg.

Eric Kellogg, a 6-8 transfer from Dickinson State, will contribute at one of the forward positions. He scored 15.8 points and 9.4 rebounds at the North Dakota school.

Mission returnee Alan Pollard will need to contribute inside this year. Pollard, a 6-9 forward/center, redshirted part of his freshman year at BYU before leaving on a mission.

Because of the team's inexperience, incoming freshmen might see some action this season. At forwards, Anthony Matthews, 6-5, and Jeff Chatman, 6-6, might contribute. Matthews scored 21.0 points per game for Modesto High last year. Chatman averaged 26.4 points per game at Munford High in Talladega, Alabama.

At guard, 6-6 Andy Toolson and 6-2 Marty Haws will add different dimensions to the Cougar attack. Toolson scored 21.0 points per game for Twin Falls High School. Haws poured in 18.0 points at Hillcrest High. He also was State champion in the 100-meter dash.

With a tough early schedule that begins November 30 against LaSalle in the Stanford Invitational, the Cougars will need to take full advantage of their remaining week of practice. The first home game is December 4 against Utah State. The Cougar Classic will follow on December 14 and 15.

Season tickets are still available at the Marriott Center Ticket Office.

Lynn Henderson: Baseline Slugger

By Ellen Larsen
Women's Sports Information
Director

My racket face is parallel to the net. Then just as the ball is rising, I hit," says freshman Lynn Henderson of her forehand drive, reputed to be the most potent in college tennis.

"In the juniors, my opponents always said I hit hard," says Lynn, "and the coaches always mentioned it. I knew I had a strong forehand, but I didn't know it was that hard."

Recently, Ike Groce, women's coach at Oklahoma State, said he had never seen a college player hit a forehand as hard as Lynn. His opinion is echoed by Cougar coach Ann Valentine, who has seen the best.

"I really don't have to think about hitting hard," says Lynn, a 5-10½, 18-year-old prep All-American from Manteca, California, whose father was her only coach until she came to BYU. "My main concern is getting eye contact with the ball and hitting it at the right time, not the power I don't lean into the stroke that much."

"I think my size helps, and I used to run, jump rope, and do small weights, but I don't try to hit really hard unless it's necessary for a cross-court shot or something. I always feel I have some power left."

Like father, like daughter, could be said of Lynn and her dad, except for their height. "He is competitive like me," says Lynn. "My dad was an NCAA champion in the two mile when he was at Arizona State. And if it weren't for tennis, I'd be a runner, too. His name is Alexander, and he named me Alexandra. My mom gave me the name Lynn," she says.

"We both like to practice tennis. We would hit for six or seven hours a day when I was learning to play. But he is only 5-9½, so I am taller than he is. He doesn't like that."

Yet Lynn had to pull out some stops to get to play tennis in the first place. "My favorite player was Evonne Goolagong. I thought it was exciting to watch her on TV. So I asked my dad to teach me. I was eight-and-a-half at the time, and he was working out with my sister Pam (also named Alexandra) who is four years older than I. My dad said that I was too young to learn. Then I cried, and he gave in. He usually does," says Lynn.

"I used to practice with him on the Manteca High courts. He gave me equal time with Pam. When he was hitting with her, I would hit against the backboard." (Pam became All-American in tennis at Texas-Permian Basin.)

Like her dad, Lynn says that she loves to beat people. "Even when I play Ping Pong against my friends, I really get into it. Yet if I lose a tennis match, I don't get upset. I don't stomp around or anything."

So far, Lynn has been sharing center court at BYU with Lesley Hakala, another freshman standout, and she says she hasn't really thought about being No. 1. "Every winning match is a point for the team," she says. "Everyone is rooting for each other. In the juniors, it was different. Everybody was against everybody there."

Of the 10 schools who recruited her, Lynn turned down top-twenty powers UCLA, Clemson and Arizona State to play for BYU. "I liked the school and the coach," she says.

So far this season, Lynn has defeated Renata Marcinkowska, Karen Seguso, Robyn Lamb and teammate Hakala—all ranked in the top 50. And in junior play, she has notched wins over 10 other ranked players, including No. 5 Caroline Lynn's forehand has been a smashing success.

Kuhlman of Southern Cal and No. 6 Anna Ivan of Stanford.

"Lynn will be ranked soon because she's beaten ranked players," says Valentine.

In national level junior play, Lynn won the Pacific Coast Championships in 14s in 1980, and in 16s in 1981 and 1982. She won the Fiesta Bowl 18s championship, and at the end of her senior year was named Prince High School All-America.

At BYU Lynn has found a doubles partner in 5-3 sophomore Jennifer Stoker, a combo that strengthens the Cougar lineup and that reached the semifinals of the Rolex Central Championships earlier this month.

"I haven't really played doubles that much. But I feel comfortable with Jennifer because our temperaments are alike. We don't get upset with each other if we lose a point. If one of us is having a problem, we talk to each other about it."

"Yet our games are different. She doesn't hit really hard, but she gets everything back. She places the ball really well."

Lynn says that she feels confident with all her strokes. "Besides my flat forehand, I have a hard and flat serve, but my backhand is top spin. I don't hit my backhand as hard as my forehand, but I place it more. I sometimes run around my backhand to get to my forehand," she adds. "Since I'm a baseliner, if it's windy, I might hit a little top spin. And I can hit soft shots. I drop shot a lot. I'm consistent. I can get the ball back." All this is spoken with quiet modesty.

Valentine affirms Lynn's court sense. "A lot of people can play tennis, but only the good players can put the ball where they want it with the right speed. Lynn can do this."

Right now in practice, Lynn works mostly on her volley. "Coach Valentine says she wouldn't think of touching my ground strokes," says Lynn.

Trevor Matich: Center of Attention

By Jim Holland

To look at him now, it is hard to believe BYU center Trevor Matich was ever too small to play football. At 6-4, 260 pounds, the native of Sacramento, California, is anything but too small.

"I was a pretty small kid, 5-6 and skinny," said Matich. "In fact, I barely made the flag football team in junior high. I never really played until my senior year."

Max Miller, head coach of the Raiders at Rio Americano High School in Sacramento, where Matich played, did not see a skinny prepster.

"Actually Trevor only thought he was too small. I saw a tall, lanky guy with great agility, who was super dedicated, sincere, intense and very kind. He fit our philosophy perfectly. I knew he'd grow," said Miller.

To put some meat on his bones, Matich worked in the Rio Americano weight room every day.

"Trevor has always been determined to do whatever was necessary," said Miller. "He was more dedicated to the weights than just about anybody in our program. His heart has always been bigger than the rest of him. There was really no question as to whether or not he could play."

With the help of the weights and Mother Nature, Matich began to grow at the beginning of his sophomore year. He saw some playing time during the next couple of seasons but did not start until his senior year.

At 6-4, and nearly 200 pounds, he saw plenty of action as the starting center.

"I wanted to be a tight end, but the coaches told me I was to play on the line. Initially they put me at tackle but then moved me to center," said Matich.

"Trevor was the type of guy who would do anything he was asked," said Miller. "He was not only the right size, he also had the speed and mental abilities we needed. He made a great center."

Everyone knows that a quarterback has got to have a strong arm and receivers need good hands

Trevor Matich is the man who hands the ball to Robbie Bosco on every play.

but what do centers need?

"A center can't be dumb," said Matich. "He doesn't just hike the ball and push somebody. He has got to be able to recognize all the defensive alignments so he can call the line sets."

"Pass blocking looks like it is just pushing another guy but it's much more intricate than that."

Matich compares playing the offensive line to fencing.

"The defensive linemen will use different techniques to get at the quarterback and the offensive linemen must recognize those sets and make counter moves," he said.

He must have been successful at making those counter-moves because at the end of his senior year, Matich was named all-conference, all-city, all-Northern California and was nominated for all-American honors.

After high school he was recruited by many different schools. Most of the offers came from the Pac-10, but there were some from schools in the Midwest, including BYU.

"It was a difficult decision at the time," said Matich. "I was a 17-year-old kid. All my Mormon friends told me to go to BYU, but they never gave me any reasons why. All my non-Mormon friends said to go anywhere but BYU. They never gave me any reasons either."

Matich tried to base his final decision on everything but religion.

"I wanted to go somewhere where I would be happy athletically, socially and academically. After a lot of thought, I narrowed the decision to Cal-Berkeley and BYU. Two days before the signing deadline I had made no decision."

Finally Matich's mother tried to help him see his options with a little more clarity.

"She told me, 'Trevor, I'll love you no matter what, but if you don't go to BYU, you'll break your poor mother's heart,'" said Matich.

"I tried not to let that influence me because I had to go where I wanted to go, where I would be most comfortable. Ultimately I chose BYU, and it's been an incredible experience for me."

Matich arrived in Provo in 1979 as a 217 pound, 17-year-old freshman. He was captain of the Cougar junior varsity team for two games but by the third game was a member of the varsity squad.

According to Matich, his high school training was ideal for the style of football played at BYU.

"In high school we were a running team. I had to be a run-blocking center which meant I not only had to get in front of the defensive linemen but also I had to push them out of the way."

"With the passing game played here at BYU, I just had to protect the quarterback. I didn't have to knock the defense around anymore. I just have to get in their way and tangle them up."

A twisted knee in the fall of 1980 sidelined Matich just long enough for him to lose his starting position to Bart Oates.

"Bart had just returned from a mission and I was listed ahead of him on the depth charts until the fall when I twisted my knee. He started the season at center and had a great year."

At the end of that year, Matich left BYU to fill an LDS mission.

"People thought I was crazy. Here I was enjoying all this success, and I had decided to leave for a couple of seasons."

"Football is fun but someday it is going to end. Where would I be if I based everything on football? I was brought up to keep things in perspective; there was really no decision to make," he said.

After completing his mission in Mexico, Matich returned to Provo ready to resume his studies and his football career.

"When I got back I was down to 207 pounds. I started working out immediately. When I wasn't in the weight room, I was devouring everything in sight. By the next season I was back up to 242."

Although his physical condition dropped during his mission, Matich feels he learned some important emotional concepts that could not be taught on the football field.

"A mission can help you realize what your values are. You build mental discipline that will help you be better at anything. It gives you the foresight and perspective that hard work will pay off if you don't quit," said Matich.

One aspect of the emotional game his mission did not help was the aggressive "you knock him down before he knocks your head off" attitude that, according to Matich, is essential for football.

"Missions are not really conducive to maintaining the aggressive nature needed by football players. It took me a while to get it back," he said.

"Things got better when I finally got tired of getting hit."

This year, Matich started the season at 240 pounds and has gained weight since the season opener in Pittsburgh.

"Because of my size in years past, I've had to develop techniques to take advantage of my speed and brain. Finally I'm as big as the guys I play against. It's great."

"Beating Pitt in Pittsburgh was a great thrill. For two days we had to listen to the Pittsburgh media say BYU was a third rate team. That got our attention."

Matich is not bothered by the lack of recognition given to the offensive line by fans and members of the media.

"We get added pleasure from the success of the BYU quarterbacks," said Matich. "It's actually a tribute to everyone on the team, linemen, backs, receivers and especially the coaches."

He attributes the success of the BYU system to the philosophy espoused by the coaching staff.

"I can't say enough about the quality of the coaching at BYU. They really impressed me when I was being recruited," he said.

Comparing football players to horses, Matich said there are two ways to get a horse to run, by beating it over the head or getting it to run for the pleasure of running.

"The BYU coaches make us want to run and work hard for the pleasure of winning. They're concerned with the individual. They don't just want football machines, they want people. People who also play football well."

"That's the key to the system," he said. "The players respond to the feeling that the coaches care—we care about the coaches."

With practice from 2 to 6 or 7 p.m. daily, learning to be a student and an athlete can be a challenge according to the 23-year-old speech communications major.

NCAA rules stipulate that athletes must take a minimum of 12 credit hours per semester.

"It's not as if there aren't enough hours in the day to do it all—there are. The problem lies in the mental fatigue you feel after four hours of practice. The BYU system is so intellectually orientated that practices are more tiring mentally than physically. It's hard to want to open a textbook in the evening. You just have to have mental discipline."

According to Matich, there are times when the combined pressures of schoolwork and football can be hard to handle.

"There is no way to escape from pressure," he said. "It can get you down or you can use it as a motivator. It's just a matter of definition and attitude."

Matich said the pressure is most noticeable the night before a game. To prepare himself mentally for the game, Matich has a ritual he follows.

"The night before I buy a bag of peanut M&Ms and line them up in offensive and defensive sets and then go through every conceivable alignment, reviewing in my mind what I must do against each one."

"After that I just try to clear my mind of everything—especially the game. At those times, Matich likes to be alone. Sometimes he goes to a movie by himself or he will take a long drive. The next morning he tries to build up his intensity so that he reaches his peak during the opening kickoff.

"I'm not a rah-rah type of player. In the dressing room, I usually sit in a corner and think about what I'm going to be doing in the game," he said.

Matich's talents are not limited to protecting some of the best quarterbacks in college football. When he is not playing ball or studying for exams, he enjoys speaking to youth groups, a natural for a speech communications major. He is also an accomplished singer and dancer.

Back in high school when Matich thought he was too small for football, he was a member of a school performance group that toured various parts of the U.S., Mexico and Canada.

"It was a song and dance group similar to BYU's Young Ambassadors," he says. "I was a group dancer and did a little singing. I love showbiz. It's different than football but I love it."

Being multi-talented gives Matich several options when he finishes his schooling.

"Of course I would like to have a shot at pro ball, but I'm keeping it in perspective. I've already got a few things lined up if I don't. I'd play in either league; being an offensive lineman doesn't get a lot of recognition anywhere. To be honest, I'd have to go where the money was."

Wrestling with the Olympics

Everyone but Russia and its allies has declared the 1984 Summer Olympics a smashing success. The Games not only captured the interest of most of the world for three weeks but also made money for a change. No red ink for Los Angeles to try to clean up for the next two decades.

Much of the success has to be attributed to the management of the Games. Peter Uberoth, now commissioner of professional baseball, and many successful men like him were recruited to see that the Games went over smoothly.

Scott Williams, Director of Special Events at BYU, was one of the men who helped the Olympics go over as planned. Williams served as Wrestling Venue Director at the Anaheim Convention Center from April 1 to August 15.

His responsibility as Venue Director included "everything that needed to be done to host the event at that particular sight."

More specifically, Williams oversaw nine different functions at the Convention Center: construction, accreditations, access control, ticketing, transportation, technology, food services, media services and security.

The construction alone for the wrestling facility was a mammoth project. A 128-foot tower draped with colorful flags was constructed outside the arena to let people know it was an Olympic facility. Inside, three platforms 30 centimeters high were built for the mats, which were specially made in Germany for the Olympic games. The entire arena was carpeted specially for the Olympic competition. After the Games, the carpet was torn out and thrown away.

A scoreboard specially made in Switzerland for wrestling was hung from the ceiling. It too was boxed up and shipped back to Switzerland after the competition ended.

A 100,000 square-foot exhibit hall was converted into a mini-Olympic village for the wrestlers. Sixty team rooms were constructed, complete with bunk beds, lockers, tables, carpet, etc. There were also jacuzzis, steam rooms, weight rooms, game rooms, video rooms, eating areas and practice mats for the athletes, who spent most of the day in the mini-village.

Hiring people to work at the facility was also a big chore. Williams had to staff the facility with 728 people. The hiring process included taking their picture, doing a security clearance and taking finger prints.

Once a person was hired, he was given a badge with his picture and a computer wand bar similar to those used by many grocery stores. Whenever a person had to go from one area to another inside the arena, he would have to have his credentials checked. The computers would tell the security people if that person had access to a particular area. It would also serve as a time card.

Since the athletes were confined to the arena for much of the day, the Convention Center was responsible for feeding them three meals a day. The problem was compounded because wrestlers came from different cultures and had to have food that was nutritious and palatable. Besides the athletes, the Center had to feed 500 volunteers two meals a day, along with providing concessions for the spectators.

With so much having been said about the use of drugs in athletics, special attention was given to the medical service area. Williams said athletes were selected at random to be tested, along with all the winners. A doping control expert would accompany each winner from the time he won his match until he was able to be tested—sometimes several hours later.

A team of eight physicians and six trainers were responsible to provide sports medicine for the athletes. Another 15 Red Cross volunteers helped with any first aid problems in the stands.

Security was a major issue at the Games. And at the Anaheim Convention Center, Williams had to work with members of the Anaheim Police Department, the Orange County Sheriff's Office, the California Highway Patrol, the Secret Service and the FBI. The security plan involved three areas: 1) Protect the athletes; 2) Protect the facility; and 3) Protect the spectator.

Getting the athletes to the competition sites was another huge project. To accomplish it, the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee (LAOOC) acquired 870 school buses and 1,400 vehicles. The buses would pick up the wrestlers at their Olympic Village at about 5 or 6 a.m. and transport them to the Convention Center, where they had to weigh in by 9 a.m. Drivers had to know many alternate routes in case they were caught in a traffic jam.

To run the event, many modern machines were donated by corporations. In the Anaheim Convention Center alone there were 75 AT&T electronic mail terminals, four IBM personal computers, nine Xerox machines of different size, 98 walkie-talkie radios and 142 telephones. All of these needed servicemen in case of breakdown.

Those were a few of the challenges faced by Williams at the Anaheim Convention Center. Consider that 22 other facilities had many of the same challenges, and you'll have an idea of what was happening behind the scenes at the Olympics.

"I've been in many major international events, and by far this was the most well run," said Mark Fuller, the assistant BYU wrestling coach, who was a member of the U.S. wrestling team this year. "It was almost like being in your hotel room right at the facility."

The games were a success in many ways. Williams says it was because the LAOOC had the vision of how the Olympics should be run. Whatever the reason, BYU had one of its own smack in the middle of it.

Today's Halftime.

Cougar Band will perform today and at next month's Holiday Bowl.

By Hal Williams

While about one-fourth of the Cougar Band and Cougarettes went home this weekend to enjoy Thanksgiving with their families, the remaining 200 musicians, dancers and flag team members will present a half-time show today featuring highlights from all the shows created this season.

Dr. David Blackinton, Cougar Band director, said the band will play in concert formation, turning to the east and west sides during the show.

Following today's performance, the band will play for a few basketball games (the Varsity Preview, Utah State and the Cougar Classic) before heading to San Diego December 17 to be the host band for Holiday Bowl VII festivities.

While in San Diego, the band will perform seven times, including a show at Sea World, a concert on a Naval aircraft carrier docked at Coronado Island, an exhibition at the bowl's high school band competition, the Holiday Bowl parade, several numbers in the Cougar Night show at the Convention and Performing Arts Center, and the half-time of the Holiday Bowl game.

The band has had a busy fall schedule, presenting half-time shows at six home games and as a guest at the University of Utah last weekend. For the band's major trip of the year, it presented a special pre-game show at the BYU-University of New Mexico game which was televised on ESPN from Albuquerque.

The band also performed at pep rallies and marched in the Homecoming parade.

Leading the band today will be student drum majors Brad Goodwin and Jace McQuivey. Feature twirler is Natalie Dutton Fuller.

Executive Home for Sale

The estate offers 36 rooms of style and charm, secluded yet not isolated. It is truly a rare opportunity to own a magnificent Victorian-Contemporary mansion complete with a commanding view of both towering Mount Timpanogos and the Provo River.

Excellent for entertaining, the rooms are large and sun-filled with high ceilings, luxurious carpeting, and hardwood floors. The family/banquet room has grand windows which open to the exterior, exquisite handcarved moldings, and an enormous fire place. A separate whirlpool and sauna suite awaits to provide relaxed comfort.

Unusual architectural details include a majestic, three story curving stairway with golden brown oak baluster and rails, stained glass windows and doors, antique fireplaces, and imported chandeliers.

This spacious, one-of-a-kind home, ideal for family living and as a showplace for VIP entertaining, will be shown by appointment to qualified buyers.
